INFORMATION FOR AUTHORS

The CALIFORNIA ANTHROPOLOGIST encourages the submission of manuscripts which will further knowledge of human behavior. While the journal is essentially a student publication, publication in the journal is not restricted to students. Students, faculty, and other professionals in anthropology and related fields are invited to submit manuscripts for publication.

Manuscripts should be prepared according to the stylistic format of the AMERICAN ANTHROPOLOGIST and should be accompanied by an abstract and a short biographical statement about the author. One original and two photocopies of the manuscript must be submitted for editorial review. If authors desire the return of the original copy, they should enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Authors should be sure to attach a cover sheet to their manuscript, which includes name, current address, phone number, and email address. The editorial board reserves the right to make stylistic and grammatical corrections to copy received. When a manuscript is accepted, authors should expect a request for a copy of the article on computer disk.
