INFORMATION FOR CONTRIBUTORS

1. PRIMATES publishes original and review articles, short communications, research reports, notes, and other information on all aspects of primatology. Authors are not limited as to qualifications, and anyone involved in primate research may contribute. Papers will be published in English.

2. Contributors are requested to write as concisely as possible and the paper should not normally exceed 20 printed pages (about 30 typewritten pages), including tables, figures, and reference list. The Editorial Board reserves the right to charge authors for the cost of any page in excess of 20 printed pages per article, at a rate of $60,000 for each printed page in excess. Short communications should normally exceed 10 printed pages (about six typewritten pages), including tables, figures, and reference list.

3. Submission of a manuscript will be taken to imply that it is original and that it has not been and will not be published elsewhere wholly or in part. Manuscripts should be submitted in fully corrected form in accordance with the regulations contained herein, and in a condition ready for handing to the printer.

4. Manuscripts should be clearly typewritten, double-spaced, on one side of white paper (22 x 30 cm). Four sets of the manuscript (one original, and the others its triplicate copies), each accompanied by all illustrations, should be submitted to the Editor in Chief, while a fifth copy is to be kept by the author. An abbreviated title should be supplied for the running head. Each author’s name and full address should be clearly stated, and an e-mail address supplied if available.

5. Manuscripts, other than book reviews and notes, must be preceded by an abstract which summarizes in about 300 words the main details and/or observations and any conclusions drawn therefrom. The abstract should be intelligible without reference to the original text.

6. About five key words for use in indexes should be listed immediately below the abstract.

7. References to the literature are not to be cited in footnotes but to be carried within the text in brackets with the author’s last name and year of publication, e.g., “(JAMIN, 1960),” or, if the author is mentioned in the text, merely by date, e.g., “WASHBURN and HAMBURG (1968) describe...” The bibliography is to be arranged alphabetically by authors and chronologically for each author and should be typed separately. It should be compiled in the following manner:

8. Footnotes should be avoided whenever possible. If inevitable, they should be typewritten at the bottom of the respective page of the manuscript, with consecutive reference numbers placed in the text.

9. Tables should be numbered in Arabic numerals and given headings. They should be typewritten separately, double-spaced, and attached to the manuscript.

10. The metric system for measures and weights is strongly recommended due to its world-wide acceptance.

11. Illustrations must be in a finished form ready for reproduction. On each illustration, indicate its number, and the author’s name, with reference pointers and scale, if necessary. All illustrations are treated as figures. They must be numbered serially and referred to in the text as “(Fig. 3),” etc. The maximum figure size is 22 x 30 cm. Any extra expenses incurred for perfecting incomplete illustrations will be charged to the author.

12. Color photographs and tables which require special techniques for printing may be accepted only when they are considered indispensable for understanding of the text. Actual expenses incurred for their printing will be charged to the author after the paper has been published.

13. Legends should be typewritten continuously on separate sheets and should not be appended to each illustration. Authors should include in the text where illustrations are to be placed.

14. Contributors receive first proofs, which, with corrections clearly marked, should be returned to the Editorial Office within the designated period of time. Authors are requested to avoid making alterations other than the correction of printing errors. Expenses for text alterations in proofs will be charged to the author.

15. Authors, excluding co-authors, will be given one free copy each of the Journal in which their articles appear. Reprints may be obtained at a charge which is in proportion to the number of printed pages. The cost per page per reprint will be $0.25. postage will also be charged to the author. Orders for reprints must be given when corrected page proofs are returned to the Editorial Office.

16. Communications between the Editorial Office and all foreign contributors will be made in English only.
